ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This report is published by The Equal Rights Trust (ERT), in partnership with the Kenya Human Rights Commission (KHRC).

The principal drafter of the report is Jim Fitzgerald (ERT). He was assisted by other ERT staff, particularly Jessica Duggan-Larkin, who provided research, drafting and editing advice and support. Paola Uccellari provided guidance, advice and direction throughout the drafting of this report. Dimitrina Petrova, Executive Director of ERT, oversaw the research and drafting of the report, copy-edited and authorised the report for publication. ERT staff including Natalie Brinham, Libby Clarke, Amal De Chickera, Ingrid Dessauvages, Anne Muthee and Nicola Simpson provided assistance.

ERT and KHRC undertook field research during which testimony for the report was gathered. One research team, which travelled to various locations in November-December 2010, consisted of Dimitrina Petrova (ERT), Eric Gitari (KHRC) and David Kuria of the Gay and Lesbian Coalition of Kenya (GALCK). They were assisted throughout the field mission by ERT volunteer Vania Kaneva, who also produced full interview transcripts after the mission. A second research team comprised Jim Fitzgerald (ERT), Monicah Kareithi (KHRC) and Joy Matara (Consultant). They travelled to various locations in Kenya in March 2011. In August 2011, Dimitrina Petrova, Monicah Kareithi, and Anthony Oluoch (GALCK) conducted a third study on patterns of discrimination and capabilities of stakeholders to challenge them, featuring individual interviews and focus groups in Nairobi and Kisumu.

ERT and KHRC are grateful to interns who undertook desk-based research and analysis. Particular thanks are due to James Smith who carried out the initial desk research for the report in its early stages. Thanks also go to ERT interns and volunteers Ellie Bramley, Lily Cutler, Vickie Knox, Sandra Ngeseyan and Isidora Stakić.

All individuals and organisations who responded to queries, provided information and advice and met with ERT, KHRC and our field researchers are also thanked. In particular, we wish to thank Mumbi Ngugi of the Albinism Foundation of East Africa, for her insights into problems faced by persons with albinism; David Kuria and Denis Nzioka for sharing their knowledge and experience on issues affecting lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons; and Edah Maina of the Kenya Society for the Mentally Handicapped, for providing analysis of discrimination experienced by persons with mental and intellectual disabilities. ERT and KHRC are very grateful to Barbara Cohen and Tom Kagwe for reviewing a draft of the report and providing feedback.

Very special thanks go to our volunteer Dafina Gueorguieva who designed the cover and layout of the report.

This report is an outcome of a partnership between ERT and KHRC, which began in 2009 with the project “Empowering Disadvantaged Groups through Combating Discrimination and Promoting Equality” funded by the UK Department for International Development (DfID) and has continued with the projects “Embedding Equality under Kenya’s New Constitution” funded by DfID; and “Promoting LGBT Rights in Kenya in a Unified Equality Framework” funded by the Arcus Foundation. ERT is very grateful for the support provided by DfID and the Arcus Foundation. The project manager of the first two of these projects was Jim Fitzgerald; Dimitrina Petrova managed the third. Barbara Cohen was project advisor of the two DfID-funded projects. ERT is indebted to her for sharing her expertise and experience and for giving her unflagging support to the projects. Special thanks are also due to the Federation of Women Lawyers - Kenya which partnered ERT and KHRC on the first of the above projects.

Finally, we wish to thank all persons who shared their stories with us. This report is dedicated to them and all other persons in Kenya who have suffered – and those who continue to suffer – discrimination and exclusion.