ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This report is published by the Equal Rights Trust, in partnership with the Peremena Public Foundation (Peremena). The report is published in both an English-language and a Russian-language version.

The conceptual framework, structure and research methodology were developed by the Equal Rights Trust as part of its Country Report Series on addressing discrimination and inequality in different countries around the world.

Jim Fitzgerald and Joanna Whiteman at the Equal Rights Trust oversaw the production of the report. The first complete draft of the report was prepared by Equal Rights Trust consultant Richard Wingfield. This draft report was subject to a validation exercise in which its findings and conclusions were scrutinised by legal experts and civil society representatives. Jim Fitzgerald and Joanna Whiteman then revised, finalised and authorised the report for publication in English and translation into Russian. Nurlan Azimbaev finalised and authorised the Russian-language version for publication.

Field research was central to the identification and description of patterns of inequality and discrimination. This research was undertaken by Peremena across Kyrgyzstan; Peremena allocated sub-grants to researchers to conduct focus groups and interviews in each region, documenting patterns of discrimination and inequality, with a particular focus on discrimination on the basis of religion and ethnicity. The Equal Rights Trust and Peremena are immensely grateful to these researchers for their work. Thanks are also due to the group of experts who participated in the validation exercise, providing comments on the reports’ findings and conclusions. Experts included, Seinep Dyikanbaeva (Association of Parents of Disabled Children), Nurgul Djanaeva (Forum of Women’s NGOs), Aibar Sultangaziye, Valerian Vakhitov, and Yulia Votslava, as well as representatives of Kyrgyz Indigo, Kylym Shamy Centre for Human Rights Protection and InterBilim. Other experts interviewed chose to remain anonymous for security reasons, although these names remain on file with the author.

Charlotte Broyd of the Equal Rights Trust oversaw the final editorial stages including the proofreading, translation and layout of the report. Very special thanks go to Istvan Fenyvesi who worked on the design of the cover and who laid out the report.
The Equal Rights Trust is grateful to secondees, interns and volunteers who undertook desk-based research and provided editorial assistance in the development of the report. Thanks are due in particular to Stacey Stroud and Rosie Monaghan.

This report is an outcome of a partnership between the Equal Rights Trust and Peremena in the context of a project designed to empower civil society to combat discrimination and inequality in Kyrgyzstan, funded by the European Union. Both the Equal Rights Trust and Peremena are very grateful to the European Union for the financial support provided. However, the contents of this publication are the sole responsibility of the Equal Rights Trust and can in no way be taken to represent the views of the European Union. The European Union has not interfered in any way whatsoever with the research or contents of this report.

In the process of producing this report, the partners conducted interviews, sought information or consulted a number of Kyrgyzstani experts and organisations, many of whom are cited in the report. The Equal Rights Trust and Peremena wish to thank all individuals and organisations who responded to queries, gave feedback on the draft report, provided information and advice, or met with us, Peremena and our researchers. Finally, we wish to thank all persons who shared their stories with us. This report is dedicated to them and all other persons in Kyrgyzstan who have suffered – and those who continue to suffer – discrimination and exclusion.
